Accu-Right Engineering - heading in the RIGHT direction

Accu-Right Engineering was established on the Port of Liverpool in 2014 and specialises in the repair and replacement of all rotating equipment.

The company, which has been working with Investsefton under the Merseyside Business Support Programme, has recently achieved ISO9001 with BSI in January. This has been a major factor in securing a repair contract with a large blue chip chemical company in the Northwest.

The contract will involve repairing and replacement of rotating equipment including pumps and fan units and general machining work. Although this is a relatively new company the directors have nearly 50 years experience in this field of mechanical engineering.

The ISO9001 achievement will enable Accu-Right to increase their workforce by at least one skilled mechanical engineer in the first quarter of this year and then a further engineer in the last quarter. With the extra workload they have also employed a part time book keeper who will eventually become a full time employee.

If you would like to contact the company for more information please email Stuart Smith, MD at stuart@accu-right.co.uk

- Buildsefton is a major initiative to ensure business and residents in Sefton benefit from a resurgent construction sector.

Buildsefton is designed to boost local employment within the local construction sector and aims to:

- Provide support to local building-related firms of all sizes to help them win a higher proportion of construction contracts, for example by operating a tender notification service
- Raise awareness amongst developers of the resources and skills available amongst Sefton's contractors and sub-contractors, to prevent them sourcing their requirements outside the area
- Spearhead a range of training initiatives to equip local residents with the skills needed to obtain building-related employment, against the background of a chronic skills shortage in the construction industry
